

Forecast For East of England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Thursday 28 Jan 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:

Some rain overnight. Sunny spells and showery rain Friday.

This Evening and Tonight:

Fine at first, however cloud and rain making progress eastwards on brisk winds overnight, with some heavier bursts likely. Becoming drier for a time during the early hours, ahead of lighter, more intermittent rain arriving around dawn. Staying frost-free. Minimum temperature 5 deg C (41 deg F).

Friday:

On the cloudy side at times, but most areas should see some brighter spells, with showery rain most likely early and late. Windy in southern parts initially, generally easing later. Maximum temperature 10 deg C (50 deg F).

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:

Successive bouts of rain, perhaps preceded by some snow, spreading erratically northwards on both days of the weekend, with uncertainty at present in their extent. Monday probably colder but fine.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.